The Real Problem

THE civilised world feels outraged by the deliberate and nenseless act of terrorism in Cyprus last Saturday which claimed the of an American diplomat. It was senseless just as all the other forms of terrorism in the island are senseless, because, as a State Department spokesman has observed, it does not bring the problem of Cyprus one step nearer solution. Terrorism is condemned, but that is not enough. It is patently clear that terrorism has to be stamped out, however ruthlessly, and that until this has been accomplished, a political settlement must remain in abeyance.

Astonishingly, members of Eoka, the Greek-Cypriot terrorist organisation, appear to have convinced themselves that they can attain their political ends by shooting British soldiers the back, throwing bombs into cafes and bars, indulging in sabotage and attempting to create chaos. It is poor reasoning. There can be no submission to anarchists.

MOR are these terrorists A seeking to achieve what is accepted as a legitimate aspiration - self-government for the people of Cyprus. Their objective is to wrest the island from British rule and influence and to hand it over to Greece as a colony. Eoka has not only managed to sabotage British military installations, but it quite deliberately sabotaged the

The British government has a considerable amount of good faith in its efforts to bring about a negotiated settlement of the Cyprus dispute and has no apologies to make in that direction. Archbishop Makarios had it in his power to win self-government for the island had he been prepared to exercise his influence over the terrorists. His refusal to do so could b only have one consequence.

Mr Noel-Baker has now come along with a four-point plan for a constitutional settlement. It is quite a sensible one, but it will hold no appeal for Eokn, and therefore cannot be expected to terrorists to abandon their campaign. If anything, it probably encourage Eoka to intensify its intimidating efforts for the express purpose of disentering into negotiations the British government on the lines suggested by the four-point plan.

PHE real problem of Cyprus extremists who seek gain their ends by violence. Nor can one sit down at the conference table with such people. That would be tantamount, to condoning their acts of terrorism and intimidation. Their leaders do not believe in peaceful solutions; wherefore a prerequisite for future negotintions is the total suppression of Ecka.

Until this has been done, the possibilities of giving substance to Mr Noel-Baker's the discussion by proposing plan appear to be remote. He suggests private talks, but the question immediate toust to peace but that if peace ly poses itself, with whom? was to be maintained conditions Moreover they would be of for peace had to be established little value while the island and that meant justice; remains strife-torn and the

PERUVIAN ELECTION STRUGGLE

Lima, Juno 18. Independent dark-horse Fermando Balaunde and former President Manuel paraplegle. Prado were running neck and neck in Peru's first free elections in three decades which threatened to topple the Apra Party organisation.

Majority of the expected total vote has been tabulated by early this morning with Bellunde leading slightly over Prido. The Odrin political party backed candidate, Lhernando De Lavalle, was arunning a poor third.

At one point in the labulation results from the provinces gave Prodo a slim 100-vote dever Belaumde: But by the time tabulation was suspended for the night, Belamde was leading with 87,289 votes against Prado's 85,253 Lavalle had 23,095.

Prado was particularly strong in the port city of Callan where results from 83 mesas (precincts) gave him 8,895 votes against Belaunde's 3,449. UNEASY COALITION

Observers said the present trend indicated a neck-and-neck contest between Belaunde, who favours a mild form of socialism, and the Conservative Prado, who is being backed by the left-wing Apra in an uneasy coalition. The race may not be decided until after returns from distant areas in the deep interior are available, they said,

Shipowners Lose In Canal Service

Loudon, June 18. OSSES to shipowners using the Sues Canal, incurred through Egypt's insistence of the greater use of Egyptian pilots, were underlined in the Canal Company's animal report made public here today. The Egyptian Government anxious to increase the numher of Egyptian pilots, has insisted on stricter application of the conditions of engagement stipulated under on agreement made in 1949; the report said. Egypt's move was made just at a time when the rise in traffic through the Canal called for a "particularly high increase in pilotage strength. This situation, has resulted in serious losses to shipowners whose vessels use the Sucz route; owing: to the delays which for some time now have occurred at the terminal parts through there being no pilot available," the report said.

The Suez Canal Company's report said during the first four months of this year 130 vessels have been so delayed for an average of 12 hours.

The fact that the extra expense resulting from such delay can amount to more than £500 for an 18,000-ton tanker and about £1,500 for a liner, gives some ridea of the cost incurred through this state of Mairs by shipping using the canal," the report said. In March this year, the Company signed another agreement with Egrot where 82 Egyptian pilots will be ongageti within one year and 20 non-Egyptians of whom some will be over the age limit fixed by the 1949 convention.

This agreement, it said, will bring on improvement in the situation although its effects will not be felt for some months,-United Press.

DESPITE AUSTRALIA'S GREAT FIGHT BACK ...

Still Tip England To Win Test Series

Says DENNIS HART

The Test series between England and Australia should be more exciting than many people first thought—thanks to the first Test at Trent Bridge. Yes, that rainswept injury-ridden game which was fated from that first moming when Brian Statham was declared unfit. For, despite all, two better teams emerged from game than went into it—and this is no reflection on the injured men who didn't finish the course. England, moral winners, can take most satisfaction, the performances of her two opening batsmen ensure that. It is easy to attach too much importance to one match. Yet even the most cautious English fan looks to Colin Cowdrey and Peter Richardson to give England a good start for many matches to come.

CONSUMPTION

Washington, June 18; The Independent Petroleum Association of America predicted today that the market for dontestle critte oil will decline during the next three months.

IPAA predicted the decline would be brought about by scheduled in creater in oil' importe and a : stasonal drop in petroleum demand.

· Crade oil imports are scheduled to hit a rebord high of 1,035,000 barrels a day in June, July and August, IPAA' said in ils merchly Supply and Demand Outlook. This would be a 48 per cent increase over the same months last June through From August, IPAA said the outlook indicates that petroleum demand: for both domestic and export needs will decline seasonally to 8.6 million barrels daily. Total petroleum demand in the last three months, March through May. averaged 9,005,000 barrels ar day, 8.2 per cent higher than in the same period in 1955.—United Press.
